

Thomas Yaldiz Artifact Essay

My family story is that both mother and birth father are from Argentina, but their great grandparents were definitely from Italy. My mother was a flight attendant came to America for a better job (which is now a nurse yay.) I don't know about my father reasons except for working in america to send money to his family. When my mother and birth father met each other they work together to get an apartment then they had me. But my birth father had his own family to support and that complicated his relationship with my mother. Sometimes he wasn't home to support his old family or his new one. Soon I became the living proof of my father's love for his own family. Later his brother, my Uncle Leo came to help him out and he saw what he was dealing with and needed help. One day my uncle took me to a soccer game and that is how I learned about soccer and then he got me my hat that I still have to this day. That also how I learned about my Argentinian heritage. This artifact is important to me because it is a bookmark for a very important time in my life and also it's important because it tells me that in Argentina I have a big family waiting for me down there.

Argentina has a long history of soccer. Argentina's soccer teams make up most of the 10 ten best South American soccer teams, such as Boca Juniors, Independiente, and River Plate. Also an Argentine named Lionel Messi is titled God of Fútbol which means that the best soccer player is an Argentine. The argentinians make up 0.08 of the population in America in 2017. In New York city there are many Argentinian restaurants. But only two Argentine restaurants in Queens that support Boca juniors. Argentine have a big impact in New York City affecting the culture. One of argentina amazing food is Asados which is a dish made with a wide variety of meats mainly beef and sausages, and the meat is slowly cooked over a grill. Another Argentinean food is Milanesas which breaded and fried chicken. Finally one last cultural food is the argentinean empanadas what is the difference between a normal empanada and Argentinean empanadas is that argentine empanada is made with the meat from Argentina which makes it even more delicious.

In conclusion Argentina had affected history one example is che guevara who was a Argentine who symbolizes a revolution in cuba without him the revolution would have never happen not saying that it should have happened just saying we did some important things. Another example is Lionel Messi who is the greatest soccer player to have lived who is Argentine. In a way Argentina had done many amazing things that I have learned from creating this blog and I hope you learn something new about Argentina too.
